Many New Champions in Sports During 1916---Fulton May Not Get Chance

NEW CHAMPIONS IN MANY SPORTS WHEN

Although there was no international competition in sports in this country this year, the 1915 season probably was the greatest in the history of sport in the United States. It was a year of great surprises too, although there were not quite as many upsets as in 1914, and

As in 1914, tennis stands out above all other sports for the num-ber of upsets, and it was in this branch that the best individual record was made, Miss Molla Bjurstedt, the Norwegian girl, getting

The Norwegian girl sot the exercise, and also the title. After the indoor title followed many other lesser championships, and eventually she annexed the national clay court title and the crown for ability on turf courts. Her record besides being the best individual performance in any branch of shorts is also unique. She was the first foreigner to capture a women's tennis title in this country; and also the only tennis player who has ever held three national single titles simultaneously.

Had it not been for Miss Bjurstedt's court tennis again last season, but at

Had it not been for Miss Bjurstedt's most remarkable showing it is likely that premier honors would have gone to another tennis player. William M. Johnston, of San Francisco. His achievement was second only to that of Miss Bjurstedt. On the links the big achievement of the year was the unexpected victory of Jerome D. Travers in the national open champlonship. Up to last June it was a common saying that Jerry Travers, great match player though he was had fallen short of true greatness on the links because of his indifferent work in medal play champlonships. When he entered for the national open championship at Baltusrol in June, even some of those who knew him best were inclined to laugh at him when he told them that he expected to make a good showing. They wanted to see him do well, but they didn't dare hope that he would.

What he did at Baltusrol stam, and him as the greatest smatteur golfer that America has yet produced. Four that America has yet produced. Four the links produced on the links because of his indifferent work in medal play championship bicycle riding title.

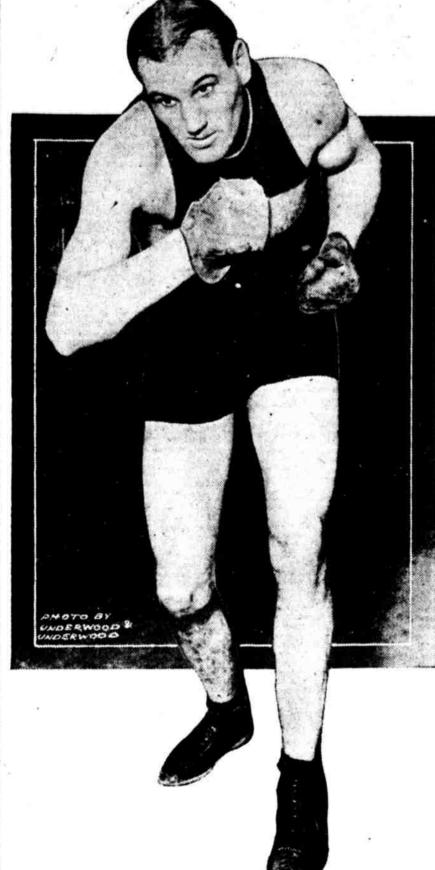

In baseball and football, however, the old idols were shattered. Cornell produced one of the greatest football teams of recent years and went through the season without a defeat, knocking Harbard the produced one of the greatest football teams of recent years and went through the season without a defeat, knocking Harbard the produced one of the greatest football teams of recent years and went through the season without a defeat, knocking Harbard the produced one of the greatest football teams of recent years and went through the season without a defeat, knocking Harbard the produced one of the greatest football teams of recent years and went through the season without a defeat, knocking Harbard the produced one of the greatest football teams of recent years and went through the season without a defeat, knocking Harbard the produced one of the greatest football teams of recent years and went through the season without a defeat, knocking Harbard the produced one of the greatest football teams of recent years and went those who knew him best were inclined to laugh at him when he told them that he expected to make a good showing. Tortorich and Burns will not bid for this elimination, or at least are not con-sidering doing so at this time, as they believe the bout would be worth more to the New York promoters. If such a match is not arranged. Willard will be asked to meet the winner of the Moran-Coffey fight. This is the fight the promoters want if the winner's erms are considered reasonable. Tommy Burns telegraphed Tom Jones, manager of Willard, advising that the promoters, prompted by sentiment of press and public, could no lonker can-sider Fulton, and asked Jones if he would consent to senu Willard against Moran. Burns had not received a reply from Jones up to a late hour today, and said that he thought Jones was en route from New York to Chicago. Not another move will be made by the local promoters until Jones is heard from or until it is ascertained whether New York promoters really want to match Fulton with the winner of the Moran-Coffey match and thus stage a real elimination that would bring out a opular contender for the title

"Have some Baltimoreans buy a half interest in the Washington club," said Robbie, "and play half of the Senators' games in Baltimore."

Of course, Robbie does not know whether it would be possible to secure a half interest in the Washington lub or how the fans and stockholders in the capital would feel about such a proposition. He is only thinking of Baltimore and believes the combination of the two cities would be it wonderful success from a financial point of view. of the two cities would be a wonderful success from a financial point of view.

"Baltimore is just forty miles from Washington," said Robbie, "and it is a sure thing that Ban Johnson would not consider taking a club from the Capital even if the Washington stockholders were inclined to sell their franchise, but it is a fact that the last two contests of a four-game series do not fraw so well in any city.
